

Problem Statement

While college student has a massive amount of freedom compared to High School, they struggle to find time management skills early on.

Who does this problem affect?

This problem is more directed to freshman students like myself. I have personally experienced the troubles of finding time to finish or even start assignments. Some of that has reflected on my grades, slowly but surely that is being fixed.

Why is this a problem?

I see this as a major learning curve for the future of my life, as solving this issue will bring me great skills for the rest of my life on dealing with time management. Learning to manage your time is very important, even outside of education, the skill of time management is used every single day. Not obtaining that skill will poorly affect one's life compared to knowing how to utilize your time wisely.